The International Cooperation and Development Fund (TaiwanICDF) was established on June 1, 1996, and is the dedicated international development organization representing the government of the Republic of China (Taiwan).

Mission and Strategy:

The TaiwanICDF maintains a mission of “working for humanity, sustainable development, and economic progress.” The organization works with international development organizations, nongovernmental organizations and the Taiwanese private sector in order to facilitate the economic and social development of its partner nations.

Operations:

The TaiwanICDF assists its partners to develop sustainably by offering assistance in four core areas: lending and investment, technical cooperation, human resource development, and humanitarian assistance.
