

Overview of the International Higher Education Scholarship Program

International education and training has always been one of the core operations among the TaiwanICDF's many functions. Human resource development programs play a vital role in assisting partner countries achieve sustainable development, and education is one of the crucial mechanisms in training workforces in developing countries. When the TaiwanICDF implements any cooperation project, it pays attention to education and training for program sustainability. The TaiwanICDF does this to ensure that its work will result in tangible long-term benefits and help as many people as possible.

The TaiwanICDF's early human resource training programs consisted primarily of short-term workshops with specialized topics. These workshops focused on the most relevant and advantageous elements of Taiwan's development, transmitting Taiwan's successful experiences to government officials and professionals of Taiwan's diplomatic allies.

The plan to promote the TaiwanICDF Scholarship Program was first started with the intent to train agricultural professionals. This was later extended to other research fields to diversify the overall scholarship program. As of 2020, the TaiwanICDF has been cooperating with 21 universities in 35 programs of study as follows:
