11 SUSTAINABLE CITIES AND COMMUNITIES

12 RESPONSIBLE CONSUMPTION AND PRODUCTION

Overview

To meet net-zero goals by 2050, global economies and corporations are demanding that products incorporate more recycled materials, and the EU even mandates minimum recycled content in plastics and batteries. This workshop discusses Taiwan's progress in recycling and transitioning to a circular economy. These concepts will help small- and medium-sized enterprises align with global trends and develop sustainable production models so they can simultaneously boost resilience and competitiveness.

Objectives

- Strengthen waste management rules, encouraging producer responsibility and motivating consumer recycling
- Improve recycling efficiency with better secondary materials and reuse technologies

Contents

- Waste Management & Recycling Integration: Discuss policies for waste standards and integrated recycling, specifically those combining public services, community engagement, and a recycling fund, with emphasis on local government outcomes
- Resource Recovery & Circular Economy: Showcase Taiwan's consumer industry waste reuse practices, demonstrating circular concepts such as resource efficiency, sustainable design, and consumption pattern management

Issues this workshop will address

- How can businesses integrate material lifecycle management into existing recycling systems?
- How can governments incentivize businesses to incorporate circular concepts into product design and production?

Who may apply

- Background : Senior officials responsible for waste management strategies and circular economy plans and related industry executives
- Expertise : Waste management, resource recycling, circular economy
